

What are the basic differences between holistic and allopathic medicine?

In a holistic view of medicine there is not much meaning in a disease name, as holistic practitioners are treating people and not illnesses. Today's allopathic medicine has two great limitations: firstly, it believes that if one remedy works to cure a set of symptoms in one person it will do the same in another person; secondly, it believes that a higher dose will create a greater effect. Also it is based on the assumption that diseases are either caused by physical defects or by invaders from the outside such as viruses and toxins. Allopathy is based on the concepts that medicine should do the work of healing, rather than just give an impulse for self-healing, and an absence of symptoms is considered health.

What is energetic medicine?

Energetic medicine is any modality that is using any known form of energy for either treatment or diagnosis. Modern medicine is using energy mainly for diagnostic purposes, for example as X-ray, Thermometer, Electroencephalogram (EEG), Electrocardiogram (ECG), Ultrasound, Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI). By conventional medicine, energy is used for treatment in only a few applications, as for example using light for treating SAD or using sound for destroying gallstones, radiation therapy to burn cancer cells, or heat and cold to make compresses. Forms of energy such as electricity, magnetism, and color are used mainly in new complementary technologies like the Inergetix-CoRe System.

Which diseases can energetic medicine help to cure?

Just as disease and health are understood to be based on many different factors, so – although externally similar – may chemical, energetic and informational diseases have very different reasons, composition and possible cures from one individual to the next. Therefore it is not possible to give a list of diseases where energetic therapy will always cure. However there are certain general guidelines that can indicate which diseases might be more likely than others to benefit from energetic treatment. For example, diseases that are accompanied by a sense of fatigue, diseases that show no signs in lab results, diseases with symptoms that come and go suddenly, and many more signs that a trained therapist will recognize as signs that energetic modalities are indicated.

What is informational medicine?

There are many phenomena in healing that are not governed by quantity, space, and time. These phenomena and related treatment modalities are outside modern-day medicine as they are not covered and explained by nineteenth century physics. However, with the concepts and theories of modern-day physics many of them are expected and can be explained. Some however are even outside that which modern physics is dealing with, as those are phenomena related to living organisms. Examples of informational medicine modalities are homeopathy, psychology, Emotional Freedom Technique, distant healing, prayer healing, radionics, New Homeopathy According to Koerbler, Family Constellations, and many more.

How was informational medicine developed?

The use of information in all its forms, such as words, signs, symbols, rituals, pictures, was always an important part of medicine and even in modern-day medicine is still an important component, however unrecognized it may be, or even dismissed as Placebo. With Homeopathy it was discovered that even solutions or sugar pills that contain neither the original substance nor any known energy have the potential to heal, and this was the first systematically developed form of informational medicine in recent history. Then, in the last century, techniques that used electrical devices were developed for diagnosis and treatment and were misunderstood as being based on energetic principles like radio technology, but in actual fact they were of an informational nature, such as radionics and – in more recent times – computerized systems like the QXCI and CoRe System.

How do the laws of information differ from those of energy and matter?

There are many informational modalities in existence that use different external forms and are mostly misunderstood as energetic (see list above). However, seen from the point of view of the emerging science of informational medicine, all have in common that they use neither substance nor energy to diagnose or heal and are instead based on the principles on information. Alongside the levels of matter and energy, information forms a third level of existence that is guided and governed by its own laws which differ in many aspects from those of matter and energy. Matter and energy can be transformed into each other or can be found combined with each other and so can information be transformed into energy or vice versa, and in most cases information is transported via energy. A new aspect that is becoming apparent and being used in the life sciences and healing is the fact, not recognized in modern-day physics (with the exception of Global Scaling), that information can be transmitted without energy. This is possible because pure information is not ruled by time and space.

How does informational medicine work?

Because there are different forms of informational medicine, it is difficult to give a general explanation. However, an analogy is perhaps the best way to explain. Just like a computer, living beings are mainly governed by something that is like software and as we know this is the most common source of problems and malfunctioning in computers. However, modern-day medicine is still completely unaware of this aspect of health and disease, and believes that all diseases can be treated by substance or energy. Speaking very generally and by analogy, there are many illnesses that are today misinterpreted as problems resulting from biochemical disturbances that are in fact regulation problems caused by software issues in living organisms, such as diseases that are based on missing information, wrong information, corrupted information, and outdated information. Life is based on a constant change of information and an adaptation of information, and just as we have to digest, transform, and eliminate waste substances so do we have to digest, transform and eliminate waste information. If this process is interrupted at any point, disease is the result. Informational medicine is the use of those methods that can balance informational disturbances.

How does the Inergetix-CoRe system work?

The Inergetix-CoRe System is on one hand an energetic medicine system that can apply sound, electric, magnetic and light therapy with client-specific feedback technology. On the other hand it is a sophisticated informational medicine device that can reproducibly evaluate a client's physical, emotional, mental, and energetic situation and also informationally balance any informational disturbance. The main problem in understanding the CoRe System is mostly that it does not have to be physically connected to the client to evaluate or balance. This is based on the fact that our world is holographic in its structure, which means that every part contains all other parts. Although this is difficult to conceive, this implies that any part can affect any other part and can be a measure of every other part. We do this in medicine diagnostically in many forms, for example in iris diagnosis when we read the health of every part of the organism from the iris only, or in ear acupuncture when the acupuncturist affects any part of the body simply by putting a needle in a specific part of the ear. The CoRe, rather than working with actual body parts, works with mathematical matrix representations of every part, and by manipulating this abstract matrix it can actually cause a balancing of the respective part in the same way that information that we get via communication can affect any part of our life.

Short explanation (for cases where there is not much time for explanations)

The Inergetix-CoRe System is a system for energetic and informational evaluation and balancing. In its energetic component, it uses every known form of energy for healing. In its informational aspect it makes use of the holographic nature of our existence to both evaluate and balance without physical contact and time delay, based on the new discoveries of Global Scaling.

Disclaimer

The information on this page mentions diagnosis and treatment in relation to the Inergetix-CoRe System, but it has to be understood that this is only due to a lack of more appropriate terminology. In any case, therapy with the CoRe System should not be taken as a replacement for a conventional diagnosis and treatment by a licensed health care practitioner.